of Fauquier.

The beautiful bride, who is yet in her teens, was happy in the dispensation of the proverb that gives happiness to the bride upon whom the san shines. The most beautiful section of the Piedonont was clad in its gorgeous autumn dress, and the surrounding landscape was as happy and smiling as the congratulating friends who surrounded the happy couple.

The presents were so numerous that the critical eye took a long time to calculate the immense amount of tokens.

The bridegroom's party came over from Warrenton in carriages at noon, and the procession made a fine display as it bowled into town; Mr. Watkins on the box in front, with Mr. Witt, the happy man, and Mr. Royall, the best man, on back seafs. The next carriage contained Mr. Page McCarty, Mr. Willie Grant, and Mr. John Enders. In the next were A. Y. Stokes and Meade Haskins. At 1 o'clock sharp the groom, groomsmen, and usbers proceeded to the house of Major Foster, the bride's father.

The cortige entered the church in the following order: Miss Adams and Mr. Page McCarty, Miss Foster and Mr. A. Y. Stokes, Miss Gaines and Mr. Royall, and the bride and groom. The ceremony was performed by Rev. William E. Hatcher, of Richmond,

Miss Gaines and Mr. Royall, and the bride and groom. The ceremony was performed by Rev. William E. Hatcher, of Blebmond, and was very impressive. The reception afterward was brilliant with beauty and redolent of the grace and hospitality which Fauquier always displays.

The bridal party left for Washington by the 4 P. M. train, followed by a thousand good wishes.

The ushers were Messrs. Willie Grant,

Beekham, and John Enders.
